Dear Ole:

The enclosed book of clippings was prepared for the Director, and upon seeing it he felt it might be an item which would be of interest to you partners and to the family. He asked me to pass the book on to you for such disposition as you thought proper. It seemed possible that this is the type of thing the family might like to have, but we will leave this to your discretion. I am told there are some more clippings, mostly editorials, which are being collected, and when I get them I will send them along to you.

We have been pursuing the auditorium matter that we discussed when you were down here, and it appears that the tax aspects can be worked out all right. However, there is some question about the acceptance which may not be cleared up until we have sorted out the bids on our headquarters building and find out what provision is made for the auditorium out of appropriated funds. This will take some time as the bids have just been opened and are rather complicated to analyze. Luckily they are lower than we expected so we can put into the building pretty much what has been planned for.

Best regards.

Sincerely,

s/ Larry
